Rationale

It took me a long time to decide on my design. I was torn between a header and a sidebar, and then couldn't decide where to put my links. Then I finally settled down on a header with the links in the header. I want four links, each with drop-down options that all fit well together (same topics, etc..) I wanted those links to stay the same on each page (although the top center image might change for each page, showing a more relevant image for each subject)

For the Home / Landing page I decided to put two side-bars in. The one on the left just a casual/short introduction/about page. The actual about page will have more info. On the right side there is also a side-bar this will list future and current projects.

For all secondary pages I'm keeping the header (as I said above the only thing that will change will be the logo/image if I feel is necessary). I've gotten rid of the right sidebar but kept the left. On the left side will be a list of all posted projects of that type.
